SATISFACTORY PROGRESS POLICY FOR INSTITUTIONAL AND FEDERAL AID

- Students who have more than two incompletes and/or have less than a “B” average are placed on probation for one year so that they have an opportunity to correct the outstanding progress issue. They will be suspended from receipt of aid the following academic year if they are unable to remedy the issue. They may appeal this suspension.
- In an effort to improve the process for students who receive both institutional and federal aid, the policy requires just one appeal for both types of aid.
- The appeals committee will base the institutional and portion of the appeal upon the faculty chair’s letter of support. The committee will deliberate about the merits of the federal aid appeal.
- There is no limit on the number of Continuous Registration or Doctoral Study, however, the institutional time limit for degrees remains.
- Satisfactory progress is checked once a year, in early summer (after spring grades have been posted).
- As required by law, the policy includes a minimum number of units each academic year which must be completed.
